abstraqt is a multimedia body that inhabits physical and digital spaces. In its practice it searches for and builds relations between humans, communities, media, as well as between art and activism. Deeply reliant on digital tools, abstraqt's work is an act of extension of physical environments. It creates spaces where new forms of within-technological spirituality emerge and other dimensions of what is seen and experienced are discovered. Multimedia by nature, abstraqt's installations, live performances and curated events let sound, image, light, space and body move as parts of one organism, exploring the depth of the notion of Interaction in the media art environment.

Wonderung: Multidisciplinary artistic event, workshop series and a community space

- Period 2023-ongoing
- Location Berlin
- Media Curation

Wonderung is a self-organized platform initiated by Smooth Transitions that explores new formats of community gathering in urban landscapes. These events consist of multimedia performances, workshops and discussion rounds that provide a space for connecting with oneself and others, and a unique stage for bold artistic experiments.

Each Wonderung begins with an open call to our community for people to sign up as artists/facilitators or volunteers. As the main curator of the project, I work closely with the artists as they develop their projects and help to form collaborations. I also reach out to people in my wider artistic/activist network whose work fits the theme of a particular edition of Wonderung and invite them to contribute to the programme.

In the 1.5 years of the project's existence, we have held 6 editions with more than 30 works by 28 artists and facilitators. Previous themes of Wonderung have included Trip, Communality, Emotions, The Body, Memory and Masks. The next event will take place in spring 2025 with the theme Untitled.

My own projects for Wonderung included several a/v performances, workshops on shame, cringe and memory, a multimedia lecture-performance dedicated to socio-political systems of control of the body, and a facilitated role play for the audience that explored the politics of listening.

GLU Festival: Annual residency at an art and music festival as artist and curator

- Period 2023 - current
- Location Uckermark, Berlin
- Media Curation, Video, Sound
- Links Website,
Open Call 2025

GLU is an annual festival co-created by the Patterns Collective, the queer rave Dreamcore, and the Vienna based label Streamlines. It brings together a diverse program of DJs, live acts, as well as sculptors, performers, drag and digital artists.

I presented my work at GLU twice as an artist. In 2023, I created one of the festival's spaces, which was its softest and most sensual zone. The project's centerpiece was a 3D video sculpture made of organza and video projections. In 2024, I played a live music show as part of aaber and presented the installation Who do we leave behind when we come together? created together with Miriam Poletti.

For the 2025 edition of GLU, I was invited to contribute to the festival as a curator of the arts programme. I proposed the theme for this year's festival, wrote the text for the open call and developed a format for curation that combines elements of a festival and a residency.

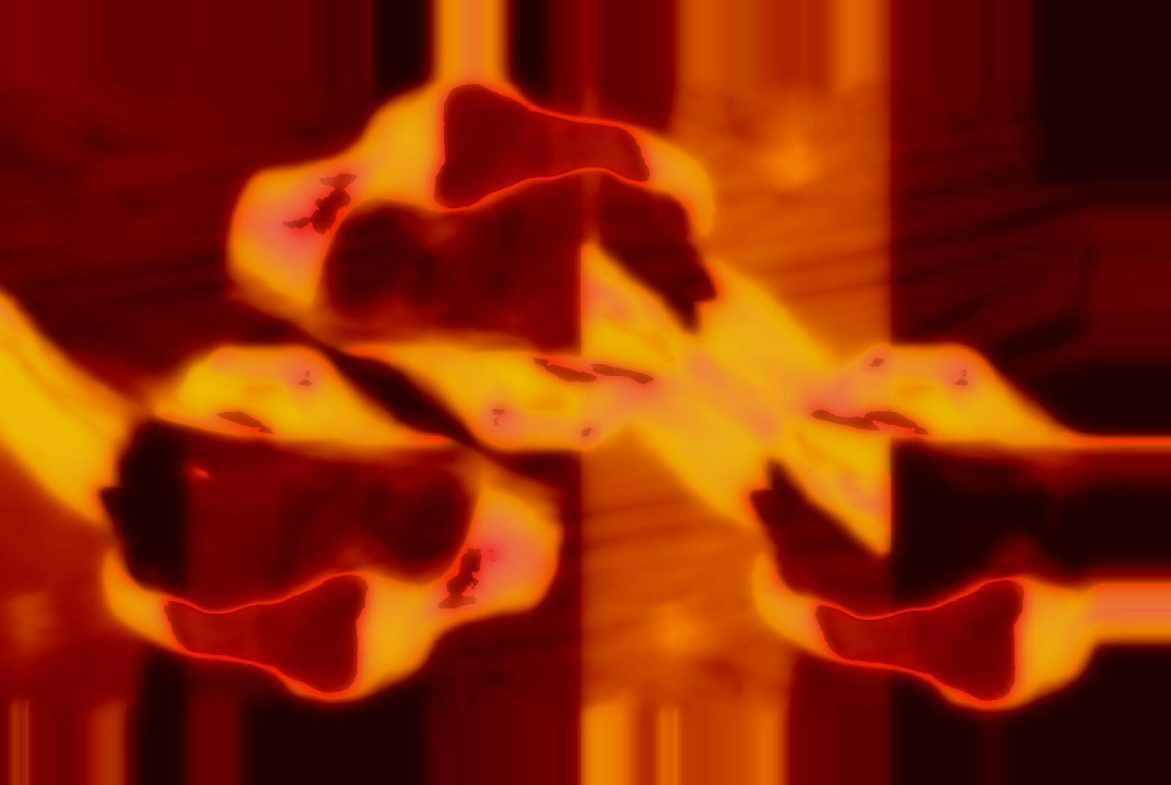

Who Do We Leave Behind When We Come Together?: In- teractive multimedia installation ex- ploring the role of communities in times of crises

● Time	June 2024, January 2025
● Place	Uckermark & Berlin, Germany
● Media	Sound, Video, Interaction
● Links	Video Documentation

This multi-sensory interactive installation was developed in collaboration with artist and activist Miriam Poletti. It was presented at the GLU Festival and at the exhibition ALTER-NATIVE at 90mil. Taking place in the midst of on-going and spreading conflicts around the world, the project invites the audience to explore the limits of the collective body created in art spaces, to confront the contradictions of feeling the pleasure of touch, comfort, and physical presence with one another, and to reflect on the idea of community through those who are excluded from it.

The installation consists of a soundtrack, a background video and an interactive system that responds to the movements and touches between the participants' bodies with sound and visual effects. It includes a score for a touch-based group interaction built around shifting the focus of awareness between sonic, visual, and emotional elements that are either present or excluded from the immediate physical environment of the piece.

Prior to the launch of the installation, Miriam Poletti facilitated a workshop called Stitching Closeness to collectively make pillow sculptures, which were also displayed in the project space. On both occasions when the project was showcased, it included a fundraiser for Palestine, and exploring the capacity of art to create networks of care became part of this creative investigation.

pingful / peerless: Multimedia participative performance by Smooth Transitions

● Period	January 2025
● Location	Berlin
● Media	Video, Sound, Performance

A cross-genre collage of ironic blasphemies, pingful / peerless explores the social function of technology in capitalist reality through the prism of religion. Blending elements of a DJ set, drag, video performance, pagan dance ritual, karaoke and participatory audience interventions, the piece draws parallels between the narratives of salvation propagated by Christianity and technological progress, the moral imperatives embedded in both systems, the mechanisms of coercion and population control they construct when intertwined with the state, and their domination of the collective imagination and visions of the future.

At the center of the piece is the journey of a character, either an anthropomorphic technological creature or a robotized human, whose advent is foretold by an apocryphal text of the Gospel of the Machine. Keeping their true nature ambiguous, the piece follows their quest after the hijacked agency in the world governed by a divine yet controlling system. An indispensable attribute of the creature is a Smart Cross, a multifunctional device, a pocket idol, a hotline access to the gods. Commenting on both religious semiotics and the addictive nature of technology, the Smart Cross becomes a primal symbol of the new technological evangelism.

In the culmination of the show, the creature escapes the premises of the false dilemma of seeing technological progress as salvation or apocalypse by finding communion, connection and solidarity with humans in a dance, ritual and spiritual rite of passage.

Shell Sea Spiral Scry: Multimedia installation by Yen Chun Lin & J. G. Biberkopf for a music and performance art platform Creamcake

- Time July 2024
- Place Berlin
- Media Light, Interaction
- Links Announcement, Documentation

The installation Shell Sea Spiral Scry was presented as part of Creamcake's event series "Is it cold in the water?" dedicated to the physical and symbolic nature of water, its fluidity, permeability, dissolution, the fear of transformation, as well as the curiosity and joy in opening up space for possibilities.

Set in the Großer Wasserspeicher in Berlin, the installation consists of a multi-channel sound system and a sequence of gradually activated laps. Together they guide the visitor through the body of a seashell spiral formed by the structure of the old water tank.

For this project, I worked on the lighting and designed the interaction of light and sound using TouchDesigner and Ableton.

Scales of Vulnerability: Interactive installation exploring the vulnerability and interconnectedness of technological systems

- Period September 2024
- Location Berlin
- Media Video, Sound, Interaction
- Links Documentation

Scales of Vulnerability is an interactive multimedia installation created together with Jona Wolf and presented at a conference by Sovereign Tech Fund in the Kuppelhalle of silent green. The project translates the conference theme of software vulnerability to a personal and bodily level. It also highlights the interplay between physical and digital technologies and the interconnectedness of technological systems.

At the center of the installation is a kinetic light sculpture that responds to the electromagnetic field generated by visitors' personal electronic devices and the piece itself. It contains two microphones that capture the electromagnetic waves and translate them into sound. The audience can listen to the resulting soundscape through radio headphones.

The changes in the electromagnetic field create distortions in the light patterns within the sculpture and alter the algorithm that controls their evolution over time. The piece is live-streamed onto the dome of the Kuppelhalle, reflecting the scale of the environmental consequences that technological vulnerability can bear.

aaber: Improvisational experimental, dark ambient, drone and noise music project

● Period	2020-2025
● Location	Berlin
● Media	Sound
● Links	Bandcamp

aaber is an improvisational experimental music project, started together with fiori161 in the midst of the COVID pandemic. Originally conceived as a simple refuge to relieve the lockdown anxieties and as a source of a rare social contact in a time of isolation, it evolved into a mindful explorative process of the possibilities of musical non-verbal communication, the power of sound to heal and relate to others, to bring the wonder of unexpected discovery and the sheer joy of the shared experience of playing.

Over the years, aaber has put out a number of releases. These include a compilation of edited live recordings Ambient Sound-track for Dystopian Future (2023), a sonic reflection on the post-climate change world inspired by the Letzte Generation event at the Volksbühne in Berlin. In 2024 they released an EP with two long-form ambient tracks and a recording of a live show at the GLU Festival, performed with dancer Magdalena Meindl.

New Stage of Alexandrinsky

Theatre: Curation of music, new media, film, performance, and other cultural programs in one of the largest theaters in Russia

● Period	2018-2019
● Location	St. Petersburg
● Media	Curation
● Links	Classic Electric

The New Stage of Alexandrinsky Theatre was conceived as an innovative platform that claimed to support and promote experimental and forward-looking artistic practices in a rapidly shrinking critical space of the Russian culture. As a curator of cultural projects at the New Stage, I helped organize concerts, film screenings, dance shows and festivals, lectures and charity events. Being the main contact person from the theatre's side, I was responsible for coordinating all organizational processes.

During my time at the New Stage, I focused on bringing more media art to the theatre. In particular, I invited a project called Classic Electric that was built around collaborative a/v shows between the students of the St. Petersburg Conservatory, young electronic music producers, and visual artists. We organized several editions of the project, which were presented on the main stage of the Theatre. Our department also had close ties with the Neue Musik and free jazz scenes, and we organized some of the largest festivals and concerts of these genres in St. Petersburg.

Station 2: Underground art raves with an emphasis on social and political awareness

● Period	2017-2019
● Location	Moscow, St. Petersburg
● Media	Curation, DJing, Sound
● Links	Station 2 (FB)

This early project revolved around DIY art raves that we organized with a group of enthusiastic friends. We wanted to provide an alternative space in the Moscow and St. Petersburg scenes of the late 2010s that both resisted the commercialization of nightlife and existed in spite of increasing police surveillance and control.

I was mainly responsible for booking artists and building our team. For example, I invited some of my classmates from BAZA Art Institute to join the project to organize exhibitions and art shows. One of them became our resident and built custom installations for our shows. Each Station 2 event was based on an elaborate concept and mythology that was reflected in the design, promotional materials, and the program, which I also actively developed. At the events themselves, I experimented with different audio-visual formats, trying to build abstract multimedia narratives.

We organized shows by the visionaries of the local music scene, such as buttechno, Lena Popova, or Vitaliy Stromchinskiy, and brought in both emerging and established figures from the regional scenes, as well as foreign artists (e.g., Minsk-based Dirty Owl). One series of events called Station2Home was dedicated to artists living abroad who performed in their home cities. One of the highlights of this project was Machine Woman's show in St. Petersburg, the city where she grew up, but never performed. This event featured an all-FLINTA* line-up in an environment where gender disbalance was not problematized enough.
